Use August to Assess Your Business

by Kaitlin E. McGee

In my experience, the month of August is consistently slow in D.C. when it comes to generating new business. Over the years, I learned to accept and even embrace these slow seasons. As a business owner, the slow seasons are opportunities to take a break and recharge and also to evaluate and assess your business.

When we conduct law firm assessments and consultations with attorneys, one of the most common topics that lawyers want to discuss is law firm finances. Common issues that come up are:

- Rates – Are you charging an hourly rate? Flat rate? What factors do you use to determine that rate? Do you increase your rates each year? Do you charge for your initial consultation?
- Billing – What do you use to keep track of your time and billing records? How often do you send out invoices? Do you maintain updated ledgers for your operating account, trust account, and each client? Do you perform monthly reconciliations of your accounts?
- Accounts receivable – Do you have outstanding receivables (do clients owe you money)? If so, how much? How do you handle clients who don't pay in full and/or on time?
- Revenue – What was your gross revenue last month? The month before? What is your total revenue over the last 12 months?
- Budget – What do you budget for marketing each year? What is your budget for payroll? What are your firm's other significant expenses?

If any of these questions strike a chord with you and you want to discuss more, you can complete a full law firm assessment with us or schedule a consultation by emailing PMAS@dcbar.org. Our services are free and confidential.

Whether you are starting a firm from scratch or growing and managing an existing firm, PMAS has resources to help you create and meet your business goals. For courses and resources we offer free to D.C. Bar members, visit our website.

AI for Law Firms

Have you tried using AI to create headshots for your website or social media accounts? While the photos may look great, make sure they really look like you before you post them. As a test, if someone only looked at that picture, would they be able to pick you out of a room of 50 other lawyers?

If you are using AI in your firm, let us know how at PMAS@dcbar.org.
